Economy is Great Revenue.

The new Buckeye Mileage ticket of the C. H. V. T. Ry. are offering covers more than one hundred division of railroads and steamboat lines and is the best book in the market today for the value. It is the only mileage book that is accepted for passage over the Erie Lines west of Salina, the entire system of the B. & O., S. W. Ry., the Big Four Ry. and covers seventy-five lines besides. The lowest of this ticket places it within the reach of every traveler and others having much traveling to do. It is good on steamers of the Great Lakes and the Mail Line steamers of the Ohio River.
If you desire a list giving the entire round-trip by this mileage ticket it will be sent on application.

A LION ADVENTURE.

The Hunter's Gun Was About as Dangerous as the Beast.

The hero of this adventure is R. F. Kelso of Juniper Flats. Juniper Flats is way down in Riverside county in a nest of tangled, brush-covered hills between Lake View and San Jacinto. Kelso is a big, burly, bearded man, with a good humored smile and an honest face. He makes his living by digging manzanita and creosote wood, which is haulled to Riverside and sold for $7 a cord. One day he had his load ready to start on his weary drags across the plains, when the family heard the dogs barking up on the hill back of the house. Kelso went for his gun. Now, this gun of Kelso's is a fearful and wonderful weapon. It had once been a single-barreled shotgun, but it had the misfortune some time in the misty past to have the whole stock smashed off. The hammer was left, it is true, but it was still cocked under any circumstances, and everything about the hammer was gone. Some of my brave readers who are not afraid to pull a trigger may think it an undisable job to hold up the hammer of Kelso's gun with the thumb, stick the whole thing out at a safe distance from the face, shut one eye, take aim—make ready—and let the hammer slip—bang!

Not so with Kelso, however. He took his fragmentary relic and strode away through the brush to see what the dogs were raising such a row about.

The rocks on the top of this hill are huge cubes and rectangular blocks as big as houses fresh flung from the hand of God. The dogs were barking about the crevices of one of these. Kelso climbed laboriously to the top of it, so as to look down and find the wilycat or whatever it might be, when, as he scaled the crest, a giant mountain lion made a rush past him close enough to touch, and stood glaring down savagely at the yellow dogs, switching his tail with an uneasy, nervous energy.

The lion made a spring down among the dogs, struck them off to right and left and went in great leaps down the mountain side that slopes toward San Jacinto. The dogs pursued, and after them flew the excited Kelso. Down, down they went for a mile or more through brush, over rocks, and discovered a mangled word on the back.—Philadelphia Record.

Boring Park Notes.

The novel spectacle of a steamer being stoked with bank notes was recently witnessed at a Mediterranean port. Forty-five sacks of the apparently valuable paper were tossed into the furnace of the vessel's boiler, under the longing eyes of the stokers, who stood restively with an evidently burning desire to possess themselves of at least a handful of that which they somewhat indecently styled "iron fuel." The notes were canceled documents of the Bank of Algiers, whose manager superintended the operation of their absolute combustion.

To Make Cabbages Salad.

Chop fine a medium-sized head of cabbage and sprinkle with a scant tablespoonful of salt. Cook slowly till smooth and creamy half a teacupful of vinegar, a beaten egg, a table-spoonful each of corn starch and butter, two tablespoomfuls of sugar, a heaped (slightly) teaspoomful of mustard. Just as it boils, stir in half a teacupful of sweet cream. When cold pour it over the cabbage.—Country Gentleman.

The scene was indescribable. Far and wide, yellows, greens, browns, snarls, demoniac cries and shrieks filled the echoing cavern. Kelso held up the hammer of his ancient shooting iron and pointed the muzzle in toward the fearful den. He crept in till he was actually standing on the lion's tail. As the great brute raised his head above the struggling dogs the hammer was released. For a wonder the cartridge exploded, and the whole top of the lion's head was blown to smithereens.—Los Angeles Times.

Wood Preserving in Switzerland.

A simple, effective and cheap way of preserving wood from decay is practiced in Switzerland in the preparation of posts for the telegraph service. A square tank, having a capacity of some 200 gallons, is supported at a height of 20 or 25 feet above the ground by means of a light skeleton tower built of wood. A pipe drops from the bottom of the tank to within 30 inches of the ground, where it is connected with a cluster of flexible branches, each
